

Both share the same measured row space and differ only in the unmeasured null space;
the single-pixel measurement collapses them to the same y -- consistency does not imply correctness.